

An aerial photograph of a coastal region, likely a harbor or bay, with a dense network of blue lines overlaid. These lines form a complex web, possibly representing a drainage system or a cadastral map. A prominent magenta line traces a boundary across the landscape, separating a developed area on the left from a more forested area on the right. The developed area includes a large industrial or port facility with several large buildings and a pier extending into the water. The forested area is characterized by dense green trees and a network of smaller, more irregular blue lines. The water is a deep blue-green color, and the overall scene is captured from a high-angle perspective.